We all have beliefs to the effect that if a certain thing were to happen a certain other thing would happen. We also believe that some things simply must be so, with no possibility of having been otherwise. And in acting intentionally we all take certain things to be good reason to believe or do certain things. This book argues that some beliefs of each of these kinds are indispensable to our ...

This chapter summarizes the preceding discussions and presents some concluding thoughts. It argues that metaphysical reflection on beliefs of the three kinds considered here is possible only if we also accept some beliefs of the kinds we wish to bring into question. That does not necessarily carry with it the truth of any of those beliefs, but it does carry with it acceptance of everything ...
