Definition. Although definitions of aggression vary, most researchers agree that aggressive acts are both intentional and potentially hurtful to the victim. Thus, learned aggression in humans is defined as learned (not instinctive) behavior or actions that are meant to harm another individual. The aggressive actions may occur in various forms, for example, verbal, physical, or psychological.

Human ethology is the study of human behavior. Ethology as a discipline is generally thought of as a sub-category of biology, though psychological theories have been developed based on ethological ideas (e.g. sociobiology, evolutionary psychology, attachment theory, and theories about human universals such as gender differences, incest avoidance, mourning, hierarchy and pursuit of possession).
